SENATORS ACCUSE YAHOO OF 'UNACCEPTABLE' DELAY IN HACK DISCOVERY

Six Democratic U.S. senators Tuesday said it was "unacceptable" that Yahoo only last week announced a 2014 hack into 500 million user accounts and asked embattled CEO Marissa Mayer for more information about the company's investigation into the data breach. The lawmakers said they were "disturbed" the two-year-old intrusion was detected so long after the hack occurred. "That means millions of Americans' data may have been compromised for two years," the senators wrote in a joint letter addressed to Mayer. "This is unacceptable." Yahoo did not immediately respond to a request for comment about the letter. Yahoo has faced mounting questions about exactly when it knew about the 2014 cyber attack that exposed the email credentials of users, a critical issue for the company as it seeks to prevent the breach from affecting a pending takeover of its core business by Verizon Inc. REUTERS

CALIF. CHANGES LAWS SO KIDS CAN NO LONGER BE CALLED PROSTITUTES

Children will no longer be classified as prostitutes in the U.S. state of California after a new law decriminalized prostitution for minors in a move praised by children's rights campaigners. Coming on the back of a public campaign coined "There is No Such Thing" as a child prostitute, crimes of solicitation and prostitution will no longer apply to anyone aged under 18. Underage victims of sex trafficking are to be referred to child welfare agencies. The law was among several signed by Gov. Jerry Brown this week to boost protections for children forced into sex trafficking. "The passage of these critical laws marks a clear shift in the public perception of sexually exploited children as victims rather than criminals," said Yasmin Vafa, executive director of Rights4Girls that launched the "No Such Thing" campaign. REUTERS

TV AUDIENCE FOR DEBATE LIKELY TO APPROACH 80M RECORD

The television audience for the first U.S. presidential debate between Democrat Hillary Clinton and Republican Donald Trump looks set to approach 80-million viewer record for such events set in 1980, early Nielsen data cited by U.S. media suggested Tuesday. But the initial data from the four main broadcast networks suggest Monday evening's 90-minute debate, which was carried on multiple U.S. broadcast and cable networks, would not surpass 100 million viewers, as some analysts had predicted ahead of the face-off. REUTERS

Walsh launches team to gather residents' feedback on Boston 2030

More than 35 sessions planned to discuss what the city will look like in the future.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Would you like to help shape what Boston looks like in the future?

You can, thanks to Mayor Marty Walsh's Imagine Boston 2030, a two-year public-engagement effort and full schedule of events.

Earlier this month, Walsh put out a call to action asking community organizations and neighborhood groups to step up and host an event to foster more discussion about the city's future. More than 35 sessions are planned through October.

Walsh also announced Tuesday the creation of Imagine Boston 2030's engagement team, which will visit these events in various Boston neighborhoods to hear feedback from those residents.

"I am excited to launch the next iteration of Imagine Boston 2030's engagement plan to make sure that all voices are included in our planning process," Walsh said in a statement. "The best way to engage with residents is in their own neighborhoods, and by bringing the conversation to them, we hope for many productive discussions that will help shape our city's future."

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

Since launching last October, Imagine Boston 2030 has heard more than 12,000 residents' visions for the Boston of the future. At these engagement sessions, Imagine Boston will continue to hold discussions as well as host activities.

The engagement team wants to hear resident input on areas in which Boston can grow as well as presentations on ways the city can protect its waterfront from the effects of climate change.

Sessions will also feature an all-ages Lego activity that will serve to demonstrate key issues Imagine Boston is adressing in how the city functions.

"We are excited to get Bostonians' input on how we should collectively shape Boston's future for 2030," said Rebekah Emanuel, executive director of Imagine Boston 2030, in a statement. "The Legos make the choices we are looking at together both concrete and hands-on."

For a calendar of events, go to imagineboston.gov. Imagine Boston 2030 will update the schedule of events as more requests are added.

Jeb! teaching at Harvard this fall
Former Florida governor and Republican presidential primary candidate Jeb Bush has traded in his University of Texas alumni hat for a professor's pipe at Harvard—at least for a semester.

The 43rd governor of Florida, who reportedly closed the race gap in his state's education system during his two terms, has been appointed a visiting fellow for the fall 2016 term at Harvard Kennedy School's Taubman Center for State and Local Government—announced Tuesday.

Bush, a champion of Common Core during his governorship in the Sunshine State, is also slated to deliver the annual 2016 Godkin Lecture on Thursday. Bush plans to discuss the lack of economic and social mobility in the United States and his ideas for addressing those challenges, according to Harvard.

Bush, founder and chairman of the Foundation for Excellence in Education, will visit during the semester to lecture in the course.

The Donald won, say Metro readers in online poll

Donald Trump crushed Hillary Clinton in their first presidential debate, say readers who responded to Metro's "debating the debate" unscientific poll.

Out of the 2,128 who took Metro's online poll Monday night after the debate into Tuesday evening, the flamboyant Republican candidate was declared the winner by 63.4 percent of Metro's readers. The former secretary of state was deemed the victor by nearly 34 percent of the poll participants.

Another 2.6 percent of the readers said the debate ended in a tie.

Other national polls have given the victory to Clinton; CNN, for example, polled 521 registered voters who watched the debate and found 62 percent thought Clinton had won, while only 27 percent thought Trump had prevailed.

Only a few of the readers who participated in the poll added a comment. Most of the comments were left by readers who said Clinton won the debate.

"I'm not a big fan of Clinton, honestly, but in this case, I'll choose ... the lesser of two evils," wrote a reader who identified himself as Jay Haney.

Because the Metro poll could be accessed via a Google search and social media, 21 percent of those who participated in the poll did so from outside the U.S. Votes were recorded from 54 other countries, including Russia, Malaysia and South Africa.

Most votes originating outside the U.S. came from Canada and the United Kingdom.

While the poll was unscientific, participants were restricted to one vote per computer to help stem ballot-stuffing.

Boston startup pairs with Uber to get patients to doctor appointments

Circulation is a firm co-founded by physician at Boston Children's Hospital.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@MetroBOS kristin.toussaint@metro.us

A Boston-based startup wants to help get people to their doctor appointments through a partnership with Uber.

An estimated 3.6 million Americans, including almost 1 million children, miss medical appointments every year because of transportation issues, according to the Journal of the American Medical Association.

These aren't emergency visits, but this pattern can have damaging repercussions for patients, such as a greater risk of complications and a possible future hospital admission, said Dr. John Brownstein, a researcher at Boston

Circulation has teamed up with Uber to help transport hospital patients. COURTESY OF CIRCULATION

Children's Hospital.

Brownstein, who also serves as a health-care adviser to Uber, co-founded Circulation to help solve this problem while providing hospitals with more effective transportation options at a lower cost.

"Circulation is essentially a very novel platform that connects hospital information systems with Uber," he said. "We're trying to bring a new gear into the system—modern, on-demand, lower-cost transportation options to move patients around."

Brownstein said that hospitals spend billions of dollars transporting patients, whether through transportation brokers or taxi vouchers, yet so many still miss their appointments. It's important to offer some sort of transportation because not all patients are able to own a car or secure their own rides.

"The way consumers have experienced the luxury of on-demand rides is what we're trying to bring to patients," Brownstein said.

To patients who may seem unsure about getting in an Uber, Brownstein said this partnership ensures more accountability and tracking than usual hospital-made arrangements. Taxi vouchers are more expensive, filled out manually and have less tracking or accountability options.

T leadership eyes collaboration with Boston on overnight bus schedule

With a board member frustrated about the lack of significant progress examining the potential for overnight bus service from 1 a.m. to 5 a.m. in Metro Boston, MBTA leadership suggested a possible collaboration with City Hall on the proposal.

"Until we have a schedule and routes and stops, we can't understand what we think the ridership and the cost would be," Transportation Secretary Stephanie Pollack told reporters Monday after a meeting of the T's Fiscal and Management Control Board.

Pollack, who suggested a working group with Boston, said there is always an extensive process before moving bus routes and some communities might object to adding buses that would run well after midnight.

The board in early May first tasked the T

Passengers line up for an outbound route 9 bus on Broadway in South Boston. NICOLAUS CZARNECKI administration with investigating the idea for night-long bus service centered in Boston's Copley Square, which was proposed by transit advocates.

"I think I'm just troubled by the fact that there doesn't seem to have been any movement since the last time we heard this presentation," said board member Monica Tibbits-Nutt.

The T estimates that with buses running every hour and 15 minutes along eight routes roughly following existing transit corridors, the service would cost $3.5 million per year, a subsidy of $17.48 per trip. The "late-night" weekend service, which was eliminated earlier this year because of cost concerns and restricted ability to conduct repairs on subway tracks, had a per-ride subsidy of about $14.

Marc Ebuna, the co-founder of Transit Matters, which is pushing the proposal, said he hoped efforts to collect data would not slow down the proposal and said the best way to obtain accurate ridership data would be to launch a pilot.

Others at Monday's meeting, including Andrew Bagley from the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, noted the T's far-from-finished efforts to close a multimillion-dollar structural deficit.

BRIEF

Stop-gap bill to avoid government shutdown fails Senate procedural vote
A stop-gap funding bill to avoid a federal government shutdown later this week failed to garner enough votes to move forward in the Senate on Tuesday, with Democrats and Republicans both opposing the measure.

The must-pass continuing resolution, or CR, which would keep federal agencies operating from Saturday through Dec. 9, received only 45 of the 60 votes needed to limit debate and be considered for passage by the 100-seat Republican-controlled Senate.

Forty Democrats and two independents opposed the CR because it lacked a $220 million aid package to address the drinking-water crisis in Flint, Michigan. It also drew opposition from 13 Republicans, including Sen. Ted Cruz, the former presidential candidate.

Senate leaders said they would explore alternatives to avoid a shutdown.

Without an extension, many federal agencies will run out of operating funds when the government fiscal year expires at midnight on Friday.

The bill includes $1.1 billion to combat the Zika virus and $500 million for flood relief in Louisiana and other states.

"This is a 10-week funding bill. Its contents command broad support. It contains zero controversial riders," Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell said before the vote.

Democrats in the Senate and House of Representatives vowed to oppose the resolution until Republicans agree to a Flint aid package that the Senate passed by a 95-3 margin this month as part of a separate water resources bill. Flint, a city with over 100,000 people, has had lead-tainted drinking water for more than two years. REUTERS

Clinton seeks to keep Trump on defensive

Donald Trump and Hillary Clinton GETTY IMAGES

Clinton, speaking to reporters on her campaign plane, said, "Anyone who complains about the microphone is not having a good night."

Republican Donald Trump suggested on Tuesday he would hit rival Hillary Clinton harder in the next presidential debate while the Democratic nominee sought to keep him on the defensive with accusations that he is a sexist, racist and tax dodger.

As had been expected, Monday night's first face-off between Clinton, who has decades of experience in public life, and Trump, famous as a television personality but running for office for the first time, attracted a huge audience. Some 80.9 million Americans watched the debate on television, setting a new viewership record for such events, CNN said.

Clinton tried to keep up momentum from a forceful performance, saying on Tuesday that the New York real estate mogul "was making charges and claims that were demonstrably untrue, offering opinions that I think a lot of people would find offensive and off-putting."

Trump praised himself for not attacking Clinton during the debate about the marital infidelity of her husband, former President Bill Clinton, but said that he may take up the attack line going forward. There are two more debates scheduled, on Oct. 9 in St. Louis and Oct. 19 in Las Vegas, ahead of the Nov. 8 election.

"I may hit her harder in certain ways. I really eased up because I didn't want to hurt anybody's feelings," Trump said in an interview on the Fox News program "Fox & Friends."

He added that when Clinton criticized him for his treatment of women, he held back, saying, "I was going to hit her with her husband's women. And I decided I shouldn't do it because her daughter was in the room."

Clinton brushed off Trump's vow, saying, "He can run his campaign however he chooses."

Trump himself was still married to his first wife, Ivana Trump, when he had a high-profile affair with Marla Maples, who became his second wife. He eventually divorced Maples and married his third and current wife, Melania Trump.

Clinton, a former senator and secretary of state, stepped up her criticism of Trump for refusing to release his tax returns, as presidential candidates have done for decades, and for saying during the debate that not paying federal income tax "makes me smart."

"He actually bragged about gaming the system to get out of paying his fair share of taxes. In fact, I think there's a strong probability he hasn't paid federal taxes a lot of years," she said at a campaign rally in Raleigh, North Carolina, a pivotal state in the election.

Well, this is no fun: Naomi Watts and Liev Schreiber split

There are celebrity couples whose names you turn into fun portmanteaux, like "Brangelina" or (digging up an old Colbertism) "Filliam H. Muffman." Then there are celebrity couples you take for granted, assuming they'd always be a power pair even if paparazzi didn't spy on their every trip to buy toothpaste and crunchy peanut butter. Naomi Watts and Liev Schreiber (Schratts? Lioami? We got nothin') were one of those couples.

Note the past tense, because, sadly, they are now no longer one of those couples. The acclaimed actors, who've been together for 11 years and had two children — and who we sometimes forgot were a couple, because we didn't think to always invade their privacy — publicly announced their split, after noting they sort of kind of split up about a year ago: moving into separate NYC apartments, juggling parental hand-offs, all while putting in the occasional public appearance, as they did at last year's Oscars.

There's no tabloid-y joy to be had here: Both are fine actors we probably take for granted, as we did their coupledness, and both seem like very nice people who deserve happiness. Sad face.

Katy Perry strips down in the name of democracy

After telling her Twitter followers Monday that she would be "using [her] body as clickbait to help change the world," Katy Perry proved that she's serious about her promises. The 31-year-old pop star upheld her vow, offering the world a video of her rolling out of bed to vote — naked.

In the "Funny or Die" clip produced in collaboration with Rock the Vote, Perry rises out of bed a frazzled mess, with popcorn and candy in her hair, and heads straight down to the polls, no touch-up necessary.

After all, the star was eager to share her good news: "This year, you can look like s—t when you vote."

"In the name of democracy, any just out-of-bed look is A-OK," she says in the video. "A child's onesie, hunk in kids' briefs, that free XL T-shirt you got from your bank—or, if you're like me—I sleep naked."

Unfortunately for Perry, arriving at the polls in the nude isn't so legal, even in the world of comedic simulation, and the star is immediately put in cuffs. It appears she might have only "briefly scanned" her constitutional rights.

Speeding off in the back of the cop car, Perry ends the clip with a brief recantation: "My bad, you have to wear clothes. See you at the polls Nov. 8th."

Gigi Hadid defends her self-defense moves during Milan Fashion Week

Gigi Hadid may be young, but she knows how to stand up for herself.

The 21-year-old supermodel was leaving the Max Mara show during Milan Fashion Week when a stranger grabbed her from behind and tried to lift her up. Hadid responded both verbally and physically, elbowing the attacker and yelling at him, "Who the f—k are you, you piece of s—t?"

In an interview in Tuesday's Lenny Letter, Hadid reflected on the incident, telling Lena Dunham that "muscle memory" from her athletic past as a volleyball player and more recently, boxing, spurred her quick reflexes.

"It just came out when he grabbed me, I couldn't help it — it wasn't a choice. I do have that fighter in me," she said.

Although Hadid was clearly the victim in this scenario, the young "It girl" has received flack for fighting back. Hadid vented to Dunham about a headline describing her self-defense as "not model behavior."

"First of all, it was a woman who wrote a story with that headline. What would you tell your daughter to do? If my behavior isn't model behavior, then what is?"

You go, girl. Looks like Hadid has just made a name for herself as a kick-ass young feminist.

Elisabeth Moss takes her work seriously, not herself

The "Mad Men" alum talks about her new indie, "The Free World," and focusing with 50 people in the room.

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

Elisabeth Moss is doing fine post-"Mad Men," thank you very much. She's done a bit of TV; she's about to return as Detective Robin Griffin in the show "Top of the Lake." But the actress has mostly been doing lots and lots of movies: "Listen Up Philip" and "Queen of Earth"; "Truth" and "High-Rise." In the indie drama "The Free World," she plays a woman who has just escaped her abusive husband and winds up bonding with an ex-con (Boyd Holbrook of "Narcos"). The role requires her to be more hysterical than she's ever been on-screen before. But the Golden Globe-winner, 34, took such scenes in stride.

Your first scenes here are really intense: you scream, you cry, you throw fits. But I've read you're not the type of actor who has to be the character to play the character. I'm not a Method actor or anything. It's all pretend for me. I don't take it seriously. I'm a big believer in leaving it all behind.

How do you get to those intense places then? For me, I need to get into a quiet headspace. It's more about preserving my energy and not getting distracted. I listen to a lot of music and I have my headphones in a lot. That's my way of getting away from the 50 or 100 people that are there, and making sure I'm in whatever place I need to be in — even if that just means not chit-chatting.

Independent films aren't always easy. Were there things about the film that were hard?

We shot in New Orleans in August. I don't even need to say anything beyond that. [Laughs] It was unbelievably hot. I have never been in weather like that. It was sort of miserable, honestly. [Laughs]

How on earth do you act in extreme heat, as well as extreme humidity?

We had a lot of ice packs that we would put on our wrists and neck, and little fans. And of course, everywhere you go on an independent film, nothing has air conditioning. [Laughs] [My character] wears this beautiful blue dress, and there were two of them. Halfway through the day, the first one would be a different, darker shade of blue, because I had sweated through it. I would have to change into a new dress. [Laughs] I'd never experienced anything like it. It's a beautiful and wonderful place. It was just like, "Oooh, hot in August."

LOVE WHERE YOU LIVE

While many consider these two neighborhoods to be a bastion of undergrads, the area is cultivating popularity with professionals.

MEGAN JOHNSON
letters@metro.us

They follow the scent of soon-to-be-built Trader Joe's like catnip. Working professionals who used to view Allston and Brighton as messy neighborhoods for college kids looking to drink Pabst Blue Ribbon and smoke Parliament Lights are now flocking to the area.

"I have been seeing more people in their late 20s to 30s, and I wonder if Allston's demographic is starting to trend a bit older, more professional than it's known for," says Brynna Epperly, 29, a financial associate who lives off Commonwealth Avenue in Allston. She rents a three-bed, one-bath unit with two friends, for which they pay $2,325 per month, including heat and hot water.

Real estate professionals echo Epperly's sentiments. "I think more people are seeing Allston and Brighton as a cost effective alternative to Cambridge, especially with Harvard relocating its Science and Engineering Complex in Lower Allston," says Kevin Cleary, broker and owner of Re/Max Select Realty based in Brighton. "I'm also seeing more people who have started their search in Cambridge and come over to this side of the river because of how much more house they can get for the money."

Cleary cites the recent addition of the Boston Landing Commuter Rail Station and the announcement that Trader Joe's will move into the Continuum Building in Lower Allston as attractive draws for professionals. But ultimately, it's price that's the biggest draw: Rents in Allston/Brighton are priced between $800 and $1000 per bedroom, with prices for units closer to the Green Line going for $1000 to $1200 per bedroom. And if you're looking to buy, you better act fast. Property is scarce, and the median price for a condo is $415,000.

"Allston and Brighton definitely need more two- and three-bedroom condos priced in the $400 to $600,000 range to stay competitive with other neighborhoods in Boston, as well as the surrounding communities where the housing stock is more abundant," says Cleary.

But in the eyes of current residents, the best way to maintain and continue attracting the professional crowd to the neighborhood is by improving what's already there.

"Speed limit enforcement on Commonwealth Avenue, improvement of parks and green spaces, better access to the Charles River," Epperly lists as examples. "I like to think more residents would be invested in the neighborhood if the city started leading the charge."

NEIGHBORHOOD HANGS

Neighbors and sister restaurants Deep Ellum and Lone Star Taco Bar made Cambridge Street brunch-crowd friendly. One's a teeny tiny taco joint, serving the creamiest guacamole in the game; the other's slinging craft cocktails, avocado tartine and truffled gorgonzola fries. On the block, they're joined by Roxy's Grilled Cheese, Whole Heart Provisions and vegan ice cream shop FoMu. 477 Cambridge St., Allston, deepellum-boston.com; 635 Cambridge St., Cambridge, lonestar-boston.com

There's a lot of good packed into this small but stylish condo. At $400,000 and 690 square feet, the modern walk up features two bedrooms and one bathroom. It sits right on the Brookline border, so you'll be a bit farther away from the ruckus of the student-populated areas. An updated kitchen offers granite countertops and stainless steel appliances. The living room has a picture window and hardwood floors and there's an in-unit washer and dryer. The best perks? A deeded parking spot and an outdoor swimming pool. For more on this listing, contact Chris Vietor of Keller Williams at 617-909-9669 or visit 276corey.com.

This Brighton mid-rise has stayed up to date while keeping its "old world charm." For $500,000, this condo had three bedrooms, one bathroom and roof access for panoramic city views — it's also available as a rental if you're not ready to commit so quickly. The gourmet kitchen features marble countertops, stainless steel appliances, antique glass doors and recessed lighting. The full bath has recently been updated with a modern sink and hand-laid tile and new windows and ceilings help this listing stay a cozy home. The area also couldn't get much more convenient: Coolidge Corner and Allston Village are both a short walk away, as are the B and C lines. For more on this listing, contact Keith Shapiro of Realty Executives Boston West at 508-879-0660.

64 Allston St., Unit 5

At a reduced price and in an advantageous area, this one bedroom, one bathroom condo has everything you need. This second floor unit features an open-concept layout that makes its 581 square feet seem like much more. At $379,000, this cozy unit has a deeded off-street parking spot included. The updated kitchen offers granite counters and professional-grade Bosch appliances. Because it's right between Commonwealth and Brighton avenues, you'll be steps away from all the best eating, shopping and bars Allston has to offer, along with easy access to the Mass Pike and Storrow Drive. Red Sox can beat anyone in the AL

How do the Sox match up against potential opponents?

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

It's becoming increasingly likely that the American League playoffs will feature three AL East teams, led by the Red Sox as the division champs.

If the season ended today, the Sox would host the winner of an Orioles-Blue Jays Wild Card showdown. Here's a glance at how the Sox match up against both of those squads as well as the Rangers and Indians — who are also headed to the postseason.

Baltimore

The Red Sox finished the season 11-8 against the O's. They padded that record just last week when they ripped off four in a row in Baltimore. It's highly unlikely though that the Red Sox can stay THIS hot when the reach October. Keep in mind that the back end of this much-acclaimed win streak featured victories over Tampa Bay — a team that checked out just after the Fourth of July.

The best series to look at between the Sox and O's might be the one that took place at Fenway in early September. The Sox pounded the O's, 12-2, in the opener but lost 6-3 and 1-0 in the final two games.

David Price (who would start Game 2 of an ALDS against the O's) has been solid against Baltimore recently, as he has given up an average of just two runs in three starts since the beginning of August.

Toronto

The Sox are 6-7 against the Jays this season and still have three games against them this weekend — albeit those games might not mean all that much.

Price has been extremely effective against this old club this season, giving up an average of just two earned runs in three starts, but he hasn't pitched against them since June.

expect a slugfest if these two meet in the playoffs. The two squads put up final scores of 12-5, 7-2 and 11-6 in their last series.

Cleveland

The Red Sox are 4-2 against Terry Francona and friends this year. The Sox' 2016 season started in Cleveland many moons ago as they were rained out on opening day, but got things underway on April 5 — a 6-2 Red Sox win. The Sox last played at the House Formerly Known as Jacobs Field on Aug. 15 and won 3-2 thanks in large part to a two-run David Ortiz blast. Ortiz, who will no doubt be looking to go out with a bang this postseason, loves playing in "The Land."

"I always love hitting in this park," Ortiz said at the time. "Who doesn't? It's a really good hitting ballpark."

Texas

The Sox are 3-3 against the Rangers this season, but haven't played them since July 6. They're obviously a much different team than they were at that point in the season, as are the Rangers, but

FACULTY AND INSTITUTIONAL LEADERSHIP POSITION IN BIOMEDICAL INFORMATICS

The Geisel School of Medicine at Dartmouth College (Geisel) and its major clinical partner, Dartmouth Hitchcock, seek an outstanding individual who is pursuing a vigorous, independent research program focused on developing innovative informatics methods and technologies to advance medical care, biomedical science, and human health to join our faculty and lead our efforts in Biomedical Informatics. The successful individual will also serve as Director of Biomedical Informatics for the Dartmouth Clinical and Translational Science Institute (CTSA; called Synergy at Dartmouth), helping to establish research linkages between investigators and the electronic health record system at Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center and connecting Dartmouth's CTSA with the wider national CTSA network.

Applicants must have earned a PhD and/or MD (or equivalent), have formal advanced training in biomedical informatics, computer science, or a related field, a successful track record of peer-reviewed publications, and a history of extramural funding. The successful candidate will be provided with a faculty appointment at Geisel commensurate with experience. Candidates with appropriate experience may also serve as the Chief Research Information Officer at Dartmouth Hitchcock. Expectations for teaching and mentoring are a critical part of this role, and individuals will be provided with such opportunities through membership in relevant PhD graduate programs (e.g., Program in Quantitative Biomedical Sciences, Program in Molecular and Experimental Medicine, and Program in Molecular and Cellular Biology), the Dartmouth-Hitchcock Clinical Informatics Program, and Synergy.

The successful candidate will be expected to lead in efforts to further develop biomedical informatics at Geisel and Dartmouth-Hitchcock within an environment with strong commitments to data and biomedical sciences supported through core departments (e.g., Biomedical Data Science, Epidemiology, Molecular and Systems Biology, and Computer Science). The Dartmouth Institute for Health Policy and Clinical Care (TDI), an international leader in health services research, medical epidemiology, and health policy), Norris Cotton Cancer Center (NCCC; one of 47 comprehensive cancer centers), The Population Health Collaboratory, supercomputing networks (e.g., Discovery) and Synergy.

The Geisel School of Medicine at Dartmouth College and the Dartmouth Hitchcock Medical Center are located in the picturesque Upper Connecticut River Valley on the NH and VT border; a vibrant, academic and professional community offering excellent schools, lively arts, and an unmatched quality of life in a beautiful, rural setting. Amenities associated with urban areas in Boston MA, Burlington VT, and Montreal QC are all within a few hours drive.

Dartmouth College is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer with a strong commitment to diversity and inclusion. We prohibit discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, age, national origin, sexual orientation, gender identity or expression, disability, veteran status, marital status, or any other legally protected status. Applications by members of all underrepresented groups are encouraged.

Applicants should submit a PDF file of their curriculum vitae and 2-3 page description of their research interests and future research plans, as well as have 3 letters of reference sent directly to the to Mark.A.Milam@Dartmouth.edu and addressed to Chair of the Search Committee, Dr. Lisa A. Marsch, Ph.D. Review of applications will begin November 1, 2016 and continue until the position is filled.

Aries Learn through trial and error. Take a practical approach to any job you are given and leave nothing to chance. An unusual relationship will help you advance.

Taurus You've got more going for you than you realize. Take pride in what you do and show off the skills and talents you have mastered. Travel and romance are highlighted.

Gemini Refuse to let anyone talk you into doing something you don't want to do. Focus on personal improvements, and avoid indulgence and overspending.

Cancer You can make positive changes at home, but you must stick to your budget to avoid criticism. Your insight into trends will prompt a good professional choice.

Leo Don't let demanding people lean on you. Ask for favors and incentives to make whatever needs to be done worth your while. Don't let anyone boss you around.

Virgo Express your thoughts and feelings, and find out where you stand. You will have the upper hand as long as you eliminate any negativity before it has time to fester.

Libra Take seriously matters concerning institutions and government agencies. A practical approach will be necessary. Too much of anything will be your downfall.

Scorpio Approach whatever you do with a practical plan and an open mind. Being receptive to different techniques will make things easier and more fun.

Sagittarius If you aren't sure about something, don't make a move. A risky venture will leave you stressed out and cause you to rethink your strategy.

Capricorn Nothing will be as it appears. Everything will cost more and take up more time than you had planned. You need to downsize and cut your overhead.

Aquarius A job opportunity will develop if you send out your resume. Get the inside scoop from a trusted party to help you bring about a positive personal change.

Pisces Speak up and refuse to let anyone push you around. Spice up the way you present yourself to others. Update your look. Romance is highlighted. EUGENIA LAST
